Experts called in over hospital's cash crisis

by Paul Collins

A SQUAD of financial experts has been called in to try to solve the cash crisis at the QE2, hospital bosses have said.

An £18 million cash crisis will force changes to services at the QE2 hospital.

Health chiefs at East and North Herts NHS Trust say that costs "outside the trust's control" and associated with the "reconfiguration of services" are to blame for the massive overspend.

Outlook bleak for hospital finances

BOSSSES are predicting that Lister Hospital will be at least £3.5million in the red by the end of this financial year.

Predicted shortfall of £3.5m could rise to more than £11m

Cash shortfall sparks £8m overspend for NHS trust

HOSPITALS in the Mercury patch are more than £8m in the red.

Health chiefs at East and North Herts NHS Trust say that costs "outside the trust's control" and associated with the "reconfiguration of services" are to blame for the massive overspend.

"The final figure may prove slightly different — it's hard to predict what may happen in the interim."

Just £2m relates to operational pressures during the year, including medical staffing pressures, the delivery of A&E targets, loss of private revenue.
